

Launches Gas CS 1021 G for Indian Customers in March

Good news for Miele Lovers in India! On March 22, 2016, Miele introduces Gas Combiset CS 1021 G specially designed for Indian culinary needs. With a wider space and a larger heating area, all your extensive wok cooking gets much easier. Equipped with a dual wok burner the CS 1021 G ensures that while heating is powerful, the duration remains short. Again, the appliance abides by Miele's philosophy and allows hassle-free working – a single handed operation via rotary dial and QuickStart that does not require any pressing and holding of the knob to get started! Your safety is ensured at all times as the gas flame gets extinguished automatically by a draught or spillage due to pan's boiling over. The machine is designed to recognise this and initiate an automatic re-ignition.

If the flame does not reignite, the gas supply is switched off immediately. Also, in the event of excessively long operation the gas supply will shut off. With the help of different indicators on the Combiset panel one can rest assured that the safety aspect is well taken care of. From looking at the panel you will always be aware of the status of your appliance; whether it is in working mode or not or it is hot due to residual heat thus ruling out any chances of you hitting your hand on extremely hot surface.

Availability :

CS 1201 G is available at a price of Rs. 1,29,990.00 at all Miele authorised dealer stores across India and for a live demo you could get in touch with Miele experts on 0124-4006386 or mail on Gunjan.dua@in.miele.com or visit us at www.miele.in ■
